

English Literature / English Culture
Job Opportunities Faculty Member

Yokohama City University has established the School of International Liberal Arts and the Graduate School of Urban Social and Cultural Studies to nurture cosmopolitans who will pioneer the future in this global age. In addition, as a public university established by the City of Yokohama, we are committed to educating individuals who can contribute to solving the various issues facing the international city of Yokohama. In this direction, we are seeking a full-time faculty member in the field of English Literature and English Culture.

The School of International Liberal Arts aims to nurture cosmopolitans with deep thinking, flexible ideas, and practical skills backed by theory, who will pave the way for the future in this age of globalization. To this end, our education emphasizes the ability to use English and other foreign languages, an understanding of diversity based on cultural backgrounds, the ability to apply theory to practice, and communication skills to gain empathy and solve problems. Our school offers an English teacher license course for junior high school and high school level, and we believe that education and research in English Literature / English Culture are important in terms of language education and understanding of cultural diversity.

In addition, our university encourages collaboration with the local community and cross-disciplinary research, and we are looking for applicants who will actively engage in these efforts.

Against this background, we are seeking applicants who are willing to teach courses in English literature and English culture, and who are actively engaged in teaching and research.
